

Young children should be free to make attempts at written language that move closer and closer to conventional reading and writing.